

The history of GSJ

- The Geochemical Society of Japan (GSJ) was established in 1953, to promote geochemistry in Japan.
- Organization of annual meetings in autumn, and co-organization of Japan Geoscience Union in spring.
- Co-sponsorship of the Goldschmidt Conferences since 2003.
- Current membership: 1000 scientists, technologists, and students

Activity

- Organization of annual meetings, short courses, night assemblies, the special lectures for the general public at conferences.
- Dispatching lecturers to schools
- Exhibition of member's research activities on the GSJ website
- Partnership with the Goldschmidt Conference

Membership benefits

■ All members

Subscription (including online subscription) of Geochemical Journal, an international journal of GSJ

Reduced registration fees at the annual meeting and the Goldschmidt Conferences

Recognition of scientific excellence through awards (The GSJ Award, Shibata Award, The Geochemical Journal Award)

Free publication of job opportunities on the GSJ website.

■ Only for Young

Sponsorship of travel fees abroad, workshops (Torii Endowment Grant)

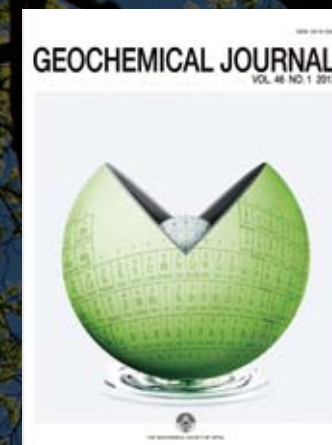

The GSJ Award for Young Scientist, Best presenter Award

Membership rates

● Student 1 year	5000JPY
● Student 2 years package (only the first 2 years)	7000JPY
● Professional 1 year	10000JPY
● Senior	5000JPY

GSJ Journal

The GSJ produces, Geochemical Journal, an international journal

6 volumes/ year

Please visit our website when you submit your works to GJ!

<http://www.terrapub.co.jp/journals/GJ/index.html>